

Title: Be the voice of the speechless as they pray without words

By: Sham Kazmi "Chairman Kashmir Youth Squad"

In Muzaffarabad, the capital of Azad Kashmir, a rabid dog mauled a young man, resulting in the death of a young man, and the citizens protested against the dog's bite.

Iftikhar Shaikh, a resident of Jalalabad Nadol, who was seriously injured due to dog bites, has died and the citizens came out on the streets showing great displeasure with the dogs and registered a protest against all Municipal Corporation Muzaffarabad. Filed a request to conduct an operation against the dogs. My condolences to the deceased person and his family, but a few questions arise here. Why was the rabid dog victim not vaccinated on time? In the present era, if there is no treatment for dog bites in the capital, what is there in the hospitals? The Municipal Corporation of Muzaffarabad should be asked that today they are leading the dog killing campaign, were they vaccinated dogs yesterday? Why are humans so selfish? What is the difference between humans and dogs in this matter?

It is a matter of great regret that a person in the capital could not be treated and his life could not be saved after being bitten by a rabid dog. Action should be taken in hospitals across the city and an answer should be sought from them. In spite of dozens of government and private hospitals in a city of over one million people, the lack of "dog bite treatment" for a minor disease is a shame for the state Ministry of Health and related institutions.

If we look at other aspects of it, it is very sad that when a person died due to the bite of a mad dog, the citizens protested against the dogs and it was decided that the entire city Stray dogs should also be killed. But no dog in the city came to protest when the dogs were killed, because today dogs are more intelligent than humans, even the stray dogs of the city know that the citizens will suffer from their death. If you read the psychology of stray dogs, it is known that they will never bite a person unless they feel threatened by a human! I do not mean that it was the fault of the young man who died, but it was the fault of all the citizens because of which this dog went mad.

How do these animals go crazy?

It all depends on the environment in which they are found. Due to the environment of our city itself, many stray dogs have gone mad one after another.

We have been teaching our children to stone dogs. Now as soon as the child gets the chance, the wounds on the dog's body will gradually turn into worms that will eat them alive. How painful will this wound be? Then, going through the same agony, finally a stray dog becomes mad...

The Municipal Corporation of Muzaffarabad should be asked that today they are leading the dog killing campaign, were they vaccinated yesterday? Not at all! This experiment has been tried in many countries before, where stray dogs were exterminated from the whole city, but then the number of rats increased to such an extent that a pestilential disease like plague spread in the public area, in which A large number of children died. We should learn from countries that have tried this method before but failed every time. Stray dogs and cats are so important to any environment that they play a vital role in maintaining the fresh air, eco-system, and all the germs and diseases spread in the air and environment. and science is available to man with fresh air.

The stray dogs of the city know that the man who is killing them today will not be able to save his species tomorrow, perhaps that is why they did not come to the protest and did not express any grief.

As a Social Scientist I am informing you about this problem of the society, which you seem to be solving now, but your future generations will suffer a lot from it. Turkey, a famous country among Islamic countries, has also faced such a problem in the past. But then a successful tactic called TNVR was tried in Turkey which is being followed all over the world today. (Trap, neuter, vaccinate release) refers to an experiment in which stray dogs and cats are captured, neutered, vaccinated, and released back into the area from which they were trapped. Due to this, they cannot have more children and the population does not increase, but their presence in a very adequate number also guarantees the survival of the city and does not create

In all the developed countries of the world this experience is given importance and thus this problem can be avoided. CDRS, a charitable organization in Pakistan, started this project four years ago today, due to which a huge change was seen in all the major cities of Pakistan and which not only benefited humans but also animals. The project was named the Benji Project of Animal Welfare and Rescue. "Benji," a stray dog who helped a streetwalker rescue a mother and her child from a mugger from the medics, is a case of America, after which the dog is rewarded. Appreciated by making books, stories and films on it, it gave the message to the world that dogs are loyal to humans.

I would like to ask the most respected people of the city of Muzaffarabad, how many people are there in the whole city who do not throw stones at stray dogs, how many organizations are there that speak for them or do any work, sorry. Sorry! We citizens have been biting and killing these dogs for a long time. But they have killed only one of our young men, but we are still standing on such a mistake that we are going to oppress our own generation. I request all the officials of the state, especially the Municipal Corporation of Muzaffarabad, to have mercy on the state of the city, have mercy on the speechless animals. Instead of massacring and killing the dogs, arrange for their vaccination, for which whatever will be done by this insignificant person, I request all the powerful people of the city to come and support us to kill these speechless people. To be the language of those who pray without words.
